

Welcome to ## Syllabus

This is an online course that will be taught during the summer 2009 session II. The course will use a sociological perspective to understand social inequality. The areas covered will include class, gender, race, globalization, among others.

There are two assignments in the course, and you are expected to engage in the written discussion sections.

Ever wonder why the economy can't recover until people buy more things?

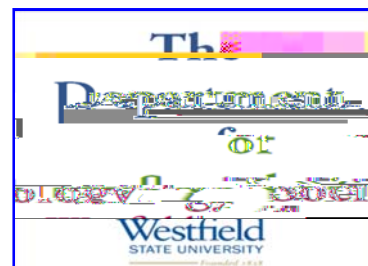

What is the difference between lower class, working class, blue collar, & middle class?

Why does too little unemployment hurt the economy and why does too much unemployment also hurt the economy?

What is the right balance?

What does it mean to be a worker?

S

Footer